HE other Matter, of which I propose to take Notice was the Case of Archibald Adair preferred, when the Lord Chancellor Lofius, and the Earl of Cork, were Lords Juffices, to the Sees of Killala and Achonry. The Fury of the Scots Persecution against all that would not the Covenant, had turned feveral epifeopal of Violence and Cruelty, and forced them of Reinge in other Countries, for the Safety of Lives. * Among those that fled to Ireland, was one Corbet, a Man of some Learning and Parts, who coming to Dublin, published, on int of January this Year, a very smart Book, ing an Agreement in Principles and Practices, Covenanters, which he printed under the Title The Epifile Congratulatory of Lysimacus Nicanor, The Vivacity of the Stile, and the Spirit that in the Book, the Usefulness of it in that Scason, interings and the Merit of the Author, procured fuch Favour, that a confiderable Living falling Bishop of Killala's Gift, he was recommended and waited on the Bishop, but was ill received in Adair was a Scotsman born, very national, maically inclined, a Favourer of the Principles te Covenanters, and whatever he thought of Practices, did not Care to fee them exposed in a ar Country, nor did he like the Man who had ais Name, (Corby in Scots, being a Raven) and it was an ill Bird that defiled his own Neft. who wanted not Wit and Spirit, and was full thatment at the cruel Treatment he had fo received from the Covenanters, exclaimed them, and replied in such a Manner, that the pobeing heated, declared his Sentiments with-letere, and justified the Conduct of his Countrywith Expressions no way becoming a Bishop to a Feditious and furious Set of Men, had broke out into open Rebellion against their Sovereign, and had rooted Episcopacy out of d, by Ways, which every body that had the in him, must have in Abhorrence; Expreswhich an excellent Bishop, one before whom the was tried, said, were such †, as 'he dente for them to be thrown into the Sea in a kk, neither to see nor enjoy the Air.' Corbet back to Dublin full of Wrath at his Refusal, space to Dublin full of Wrath at his Refusal, gue an Account of the Bishop's Sentiments, and Expersions he had used in declaring them. It dangerous in the present Juncture, when the man was carried on with so much Rage in a suburing Country, and Endeavours were not the suburing Country, and Endeavours were not the suburing Country, and Endeavours were not suburing Country, and Endeavours were not suburing Country, and to succeed the suburing Country, and to fush Declarations pass and Censure, and to suffer a Man of such Principles to continue in Power, and in a Capacity of sing of Church Preserments, to corrupt his ong of Church Preferments, to corrupt his A Pursuivant was sent to ferch up the of Killala, who being brought before the High milion Court, could not deny the Words of Gribet had given Information. He was fend to be fined, imprisoned, and deprived; but Deprivation was not yet executed in Form, being med till his Majesty's Pleasure in it was known. It lateral between the Sentence and the Exem of it, on the last of March, after the House and sadjourned in the Morning, one of the mysobserved, that the Bishop of Killala had recal no Writ of Summons to the Parliament, and a proper feat the March of Summons to the Parliament, and a proper feat the March of Summons to the Parliament, it was proper for the House to take Order that it was

When the House met in the Afternoon, Dr. Bramhall, Bishop of Derry, took Notice of that Pattage, faid it was a Matter worthy of the Cognizance of the House, gave an Account of the Bishop of Killala's Offence, quoted his Expressions, and moved that he might likewise be censured by that House, and adjudged unfit to have any Writ sent him, as being a declared Favourer of the Covenant of Scotland.

The Primate and the Archbishop of Dublin, willing to let one of their own Order fall lightly, observed that the Bishop of Killala had not petitioned for his Writ, and before a Censure was passed upon him in relation thereto, it was proper to know whether he defired it or not. The Lord Chancellor advised the House to refer it to a Committee; but the Lord Ra-nelagh urging, that the Bishop's Cause had already had a full and patient Hearing before many of the House, and other Persons of great Integrity in the High Commission Court, and that all, with one Consent, (so it is expressed in the Journal of the Lords, though Dr. Burnet, in his Life of Bishop Bedel, has cook'd up a fine Speech for that Prelate, about the ancient canonical Way of judging Bishops, and makes him oppose the Sentence) had censured him as guilty of favouring the wicked Covenant, which all the House detested, and therefore must judge him unfit to have any Summons to fit in it; and the Earl of Ormand conceiving that the House was all of one Mind in the Case, and thought the Bishop incapable of the Privileges of it, which ought however to be carefully preserved to others, the Question was put and agreed to nemine contradicente, That it was not fit that any Writ of Summons should iffue to the Bishop of Killala, because of his Crime. The Bishop was soon after, before this Session was con-cluded, on the 18th of May, solemnly deprived in the Church of St. Patrick's in Dublin, and succeeded by John Maxwell, Bishop of Rosse in Scotland, who was introduced into the House 19 Odober following, and took Place from his Consecration, when made Bishop of Rosse; a Man of eminent Parts, great Learning, and an exemplary Life; an excellent Preacher, and remarkable for his uncommon Patience and Conftancy under his great Sufferings, which will afford us Occasion to mention him hereafter.

The Lord Lieutenant made a very short Stay in Ireland; for having effected the Buliness for which he came, and the two Houses having on April 1. adjourned to the Beginning of June, he set sail for England on April 3. leaving Mr. Christopher Wandefford, Lord Deputy, in his stead; who immediately with the Council, issued out Instructions for assessing and levying the first of the four Subfidies lately granted, according to the Plan, and upon the Footing, whereon the Subfidies of 1634, had been affelfed and levied.

They write from Swifferland, that the British Minister, Sir Luke Schaub, whose Offer to go to Paris to endeavour an Accommodation of the Difference botwixt France and the Canton of Bafil, with regard to the Affair of Hunningen, has not only been acthe Cardinal de who has fent him Word, how glad he shall be to fee him, is accordingly fet out with the Bailiff Frey, who has Leave to repair to the French Court to justify his Conduct.

that Princela, as Proxy for his Sardinian Majesty.
The Letters from France, mention a very odd and tragical Fact that happened in the last Christmas Holidays at the Village of Etrope, but 2 Leagues from Chalons upon the Saone; where a wealthy Peafant, whose Name is Gave, a very great Reader of Books, happened to be reading the Life of Proto Martyr St. Stephen, to his two Daughters, the one of 22 Years of Age, and the other of 14; and when he had done, he asked them, If they did not think they should be very happy to lay down their Lives for Jetus Christ? What Answer they made is not known, out 'tis certain, that the frantick Father took up a Hedge Bill to cut off the Head of the eldest Daughter, who not being so passive as Isaac, struggled hard to detend herself; but she was conquered by his repeated Blows, and at last he separated her Head from her Body. The youngest Daughter, during this, crept under a Bed to hide herfelf, but he dragg d her out with Violence, and facrificed her in like Manner. This done, the Madman fet up two Lamps near their Bodies, to pay them the Honour of Martyrs; and thinking it would add to the Glory of his eldest Daughter's Martyrdom, he burnt the greatest Part of her Body. After this, the Wretch intended to go to Chalons, to Jurrender himself into Gaol, expecting, that he should be immediately put to Death, and that then he should go strait to Paradilo after his two Daughters; but his Relations, it seems, have forced him, against his Will, to fly out of the Country, instead of chaining or confining him from doing any more Mischief.

They add from Paris, that on the 10th Inflant O. S. as they were carrying back some Prisoners from a Hospital, to which they had been removed from the Prison of Bicetre for the Cure of some Distempers, there was a Crowd at the Place Maubert, which occasioned a Stop, so that the Cart in which they were put could not pass. The Prisoners would fain have taken this Opportunity to escape, and were going to leap out of the Cart, when the Officers that guarded them, killed one of them with a Musketoon, and another with a Bayonet; which being observed by a Grenadier that was then passing by, he was so provok'd to see those two Prisoners killed, that he drew his Sword, cut off a Hand of one of the Officers, wounded two others, and by this Means favour'd the Escape of three of the Prisoners out of the Cart; and what was more remarkable, got off himfelf.

He was first conducted from the Treasury Chamber, adjoining to the Court of Common Pleas, to the Court of Chancery, being supported by Mr. Solicitor General and Mr. Cursitor Baron Clive; where his Majesty's Writ for calling him to the Degree of a Serjeant was read and filed, and his Appearance in Obedience thereto recorded: After which he took the Oaths of Allegiance, as also the Oath of Office administred to all Serjeants; at the same time he delivered to the Lord Chancellor a Ring, defiring him to present the same to his Majesty, hoping that he would graciously please to accept the same, as a Testi-mony of his Duty and Affection. After which he re-turned in the same Manner to the Treasury Chamber, where the Right Hon. the Lord Chief Juffice Hardwicke put on his Coif and Tipper, he being all the while on his Knees; and being robed, he was conite to the Court of Common oppol Pleas; where being called, according to ancient Cuftoro, the was brought up to the Bar of the faid Courr, supported by Mr. Serjeant Cheshire, his Majesty's Premier Serjeant at Law, and Mr. Serjeant Chapple, where he made the usual Obelfances, and past a Fine at Bar, according to ancient Ufage; and having prefented the Judges and Serjeants with Rings, he then
